From Hal Leonard : 13 the Broadway Musical Piano Vocal Selections before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised 13 the Broadway Musical Piano Vocal Selections:

By Tim Sometimes "vocal selections" books tend to gloss over some really neat musical elements in an effort to condense them to a piano format or to make them easier to play. I've found that this arrangement (if it's even an arrangement) is so close to the Broadway cast recordings that I can't tell any differences. I appreciate having it all in front of me and allowing me as a player to make choices I need to make to meet my ability or to adapt to a singer I'm accompanying. This book is certainly useful to anyone involved in a production of this show. My experience with the companies that rent out scripts and musical scores is that they usually don't give you very much time unless you want to pay a lot of money. Having this book is very helpful to getting a "head start" on learning the music before the scripts become available.

And you can count on the actual libretto and scores being almost identical to the vocal selections. The only downside is that several of the songs are abridged versions and there are 5 or so songs from the original show that are omitted from this book. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Fantastic Show! By Customer Great price on an excellent PV score, notation is clear and chords are easy to read and accurate. 5 of 6 people found the following review helpful. A rare vehicle for Middle School Actors! By David Seaman Jason Robert Brown has nothing to prove. He spent one year at Eastman to perfect his orchestration skills and then went to New York. Before he had any wrinkles on his face he was working with Harold Prince and Alfred Uhry at Lincoln Center on the biggest, most brilliant musical since "Sweeney Todd." ("Parade", 1999; Tony Award for best score) He is beloved by actors for his small pieces- "Songs For A New World", which he did with Hal Prince's daughter, the esteemed Daisy Prince and then "The Last 5 Years" which played with time the way that ABC's "LOST" does, with two actors a small band and almost no set. His music is honest, brilliant and he himself is one talented performer. 13 is a musical that he wrote for and about Middle School kids. It's not stupid or silly; he addresses real issues but in such a way that within two years every middle school theatre program in the Western World will be doing this show. The Broadway production used many characters and many ensemble numbers, which one needs with educational theatre for the young and even the very tight orchestra was filled with thirteen year olds. The music is sharp and witty; his lyrics are wise and honest and they easily fit into the musical lines so that no thirteen year old boy is holding a high A on an "e" vowel. The music is difficult and the only accommodations he made were for the Cambiata voice. If Disney were wise, they'd option this and film it well and then Music Theatre International can take it from there. In the meantime, every single person who teaches middle school theatre needs to learn this show because you'll be doing it soon enough. I can't wait to see what Mr. Brown does next.
