Brett Westwood, Stephen Moss : A Guide to Coastal Wildlife: The BBC Radio 4 Series before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Guide to Coastal Wildlife: The BBC Radio 4 Series:

An entertaining guide to some of our commonest and most curious coastal wildlife. Brett Westwood is joined by naturalist Phil Gates in this informative and entertaining guide to a variety of common coastal wildlife. Recorded in early summer along the coast of Northumberland, each program focuses on a different habitat: rock pools, sandy beaches, sea cliffs, strandlines, and mudflats adjoining saltmarshes. The series offers helpful advice on the appearance, behavior, and sounds of some of the typical species you're likely to find around Britain's coast. Brett and Phil peel back the seaweed, clamber across rocks, and sift through mud to examine the plants and animals that make this environment their home, and discuss how they've adapted to survive and thrive in some of the most hostile coastal habitats. A Guide to Coastal Wildlife will give listeners the confidence to identify everything from sea squirts to sandhoppers and from marram grass to mud shrimps. It will appeal to the complete novice and to more experienced naturalists who want to learn more about our fascinating and diverse coastal wildlife. Duration: 1 hour 15 mins approx
