A parody of the famous children's book, The Very Hungover Caterpillar tells the story of one man's attempts to shake off his hangover In the gloom of the room, a fully dressed man lies on the sofa. The next morning, the TV comes on and - ugh! - ! up lurches a thirsty and very hungover caterpillar. This hilarious parody of a much-loved children's book follows the quest of one man as he attempts to shake off his hangover, through eating whatever he can get his hands on, and annoying his family in the process. This is the perfect book for anyone who fondly remembers the original, but has now grown up and knows all too well just how painful hangover days can be.

It's the perfect stocking filler for any mum or dad this Christmas. * The Press Association * Very much a loving parody, with the aim of gently teasing any parent (ourselves included) who have ever had to cope with small children and a monster hangover. * Female First * A very amusing take on the children's picture book which makes a great stocking filler. * Parenting Without Tears * Hilarious and painfully accurate, The Very Hungover Caterpillar is liable to be one of those parodies that becomes more famous than the original. * The Independent *About the Author Josie Lloyd and Emlyn Rees are the bestselling authors of The Boy Next Door and Come Together. Their work has been translated into 26 languages. Gillian Johnson, writer and illustrator, is the creator of the Thora series of children's novels.
