Tom Ross is a one-off. A thoroughly honourable, humble character, proudly of the old school - yet someone who has not only lived through but adapted to the huge changes in his beloved radio medium over the last few decades. A hugely entertaining personality, with an enviable command of the true art of commentary. Turn on Tom and you can smell the game. As he always says, it's about the passion - and Tom has that in spades. His story is a fascinating one - from the tenements to leading sports coverage on huge radio stations and a friend to some of the biggest names in the game. British radio owes a lot to Tom - and he is one of the reasons our Nation's radio commentary sounds the way it does. This is his story. FOREWORDS by JASPER CARROTT and DAVID GOLD
