A bridge book that is entertaining as well as instructiveBy puravidaloverThis bridge book by noted bridge teacher and newspaper bridge columnist Frank Stewart is both entertaining and instructive. It contains 120 sample hands including the bidding and cards for each player shown on a different page. Each sample hand is told as a story that is readable and often funny as well as instructive. For example, there is the "Devil of the Deal" played between Lucifer and a fourth from the land of Nod against Adam and Eve sitting North-South. There is "A Spicy Deal" that describes play among Cumin, Rosemary, Ginger and Margaret. There is the "Pessimism Pays" deal that describes how finesses are avoided by expert players in favor of end-game squeezes. In addition to the sample hands, there are 120 bidding quizzes taken from the sample hands with answers. This book is for the person who likes to play and practice bridge as well as enjoy a good laugh.

An informative sourcebook demystifies the intimidating web of medical jargon, offering essential information about what is needed to reduce anxiety and bills while explaining symptoms, treatment options, and nutritional guidelines.
