Joanne Brokaw : What the Dog Said before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised What the Dog Said:

Her often times humorous take on slices of life centered around many things (with or without dogs) was a pleasure to read, and reminded me a little of the Erma Bombeck column I used to read in the paper. Her dog Bandit, who has his own Blog, contributes a little to this book which will bring a smile to anyone's face. This book made me laugh, smile, and brought tears to my eyes. *Warning, to pet owners who read this: grab a box of tissues just to be safe. ;-). This is a book you can read in an afternoon, but I enjoyed savoring it and read a chapter here and there in between some of the fiction books i was reading at the same time. I also liked that proceeds from the book are going towards Rochester Hope For Pets, an organization that helps people who foster and adopt pets with veterinary expenses!

Sing in harmony? Then you need to buy this book! Joanne Brokaw is one of my favorite writers; she's witty, humourous, relatable, and down to earth. This book is short, easy reading which is sometimes just what you need. As other reviewers have mentioned, it's a bunch of articles, columns, and short stories, which I really enjoyed. It's a great book I recommend it to anything looking for a new book, I hope you enjoy it as much as I did!

It takes a lot for me to laugh out loud and that happened on more than one occasion with this book. Joanne brings out the humor in everyday happenings and observations. Be assured that it is not necessary for you to be a pet lover to enjoy this book. You are sure to relate to many of her anecdotes. This book will make you laugh -- and it just might bring a tear to your eye. Everyone should read this book! I'm looking forward to her next book.

Time passed and the dog said many things. Life is messy business, and that's just fine with humor columnist Joanne Brokaw. For almost a decade, she's been musing on life's ups, downs and inbetweens, taking readers on a journey filled with laughter, dog hair and even a few tears. From her heartwrenching chance encounter with a soldier in an airport to her confession as an office supply addict, from parenting advice to holiday observations penned by Bandit, her blogging Border Collie, Brokaw invites readers to join her again in the mundane (but often hilarious) mishaps and adventures of everyday life. "Life is funny and packed with poignant life lessons. So is Joanne Brokaw's What the Dog Said Tickle that funny bone; pluck those heart strings; read this book!" Kelsey Timmerman Author of Where Am I Wearing and Where Am I Eating Joanne has shared the best parts of her writing, told from the heart, offered without shame. Man, woman, or child, if you're human, this book is for you. Yvonne DiVita Founder BlogPaws Online Pet Community

About the AuthorHumor columnist and award-winning freelance writer Joanne Brokaw has spent the majority of her writing career covering entertainment, writing feature stories and penning a slice-of-life column for dozens of newspapers, magazines and websites in the U.S. and Canada. Her extensive writing resume includes American Greetings, Beliefnet.com, Patheos.com, Christian Examiner newspapers, Christian Voice Magazine, Focus on the Family, Pup Culture Magazine and Rochester Woman Magazine. She also assists her Border Collie, Bandit, with his blog and answers his fan mail. In addition to writing, drinking tea and cultivating her flock of dust bunnies, Joanne spends her days dreaming of things shed like to do but probably never will - like swimming with dolphins, cleaning the attic and someday overcoming the trauma of elementary school picture day. She lives in Western NY with two dogs, a cat, six chickens and one very patient husband. Learn more at www.joannebrokaw.com.
